AUTHOR BIO

Terrance Zepke studied Journalism at the University of Tennessee and later received a Master's degree in Mass Communications from the University of South Carolina. She studied parapsychology at the renowned Rhine Research Center.

Zepke spends much of her time happily traveling around the world but always returns home to the Carolinas where she lives part-time in both states. She has written hundreds of articles and close to three dozen books. She is the host of Terrance Talks Travel: Über Adventures and co-host of A Writer's Journey: From Blank Page to Published. Additionally, this award-winning and best-selling author has been featured in many publications and programs, such as NPR, CNN, The Washington Post, Associated Press, Travel with Rick Steves, Around the World, Publishers Weekly, World Travel & Dining with Pierre Wolfe, Good Morning Show, The Learning Channel, and The Travel Channel.

When she's not investigating haunted places, searching for pirate treasure, or climbing lighthouses, she is most likely packing for her next adventure to some far flung place, such as Reyjavik or Kwazulu Natal. Some of her favorite adventures include piranha fishing on the Amazon, shark cage diving in South Africa, hiking the Andes Mountains Inca Trail, camping in the Himalayas, and dog-sledding in the Arctic Circle.

According to Zepke, her favorite haunted place is the Stanley Hotel and the creepiest overnight ghost investigation she ever did was the Trans-Allegheny Lunatic Asylum. Her favorite island in the U.S. is Kiawah (SC) and outside of the U.S. it is Madagascar (Africa), favorite city in the U.S. is Charleston (SC) and her favorite international city is London, and her favorite adventure destination is Africa, especially southern and East Africa. While she will rough it for a good adventure, Zepke does enjoy five-star cruises, first class, and champagne too.

Message from the Author

I often get asked about my writing process, where I get my ideas from, and which book is my favorite. Well, I address my writing process both in my blog, A Writer's Journey, and in the podcast, A Writer's Journey: From Blank Page to Published. My co-host is Sara Whitford (www.sarawhitford.com), who is a good friend and author of the Adam Fletcher Adventure Series. I also discussed writing in depth in Stop Talking & Start Writing Your Book. So if you want to know more about my writing process, the challenges of writing a book, and how to write a book, I suggest you utilize those resources.

As to where I get my ideas, I am known to my friends and family as the "Idea Lady." Many writers have an idea for their first book but often struggle to come up with ideas for subsequent books. That is not my problem. To the contrary, I have too many ideas! My brain never turns off so I can be eating dinner or almost asleep or on a jungle hike and I'll have an idea. I keep a journal of these ideas but I fear I cannot live long enough to write all these books.

Some question the wisdom of writing so many different kinds of books as they suggest it may be hard to build an audience with such a diverse fan base. I disagree. If you know what you're talking about and you write a good book (and promote it properly), I believe it doesn't matter how many different genres you write. That said, it can be a bit tiring having to address several different audiences rather than just one. But there are many hugely successful authors, such as Harlan Coben, Rhys Bowen, Nelson DeMille, John Grisham, and Alexander McCall Smith, who write lots of different series. So like I said, if you write well and let folks know about your books they will come. They may not have an interest in all of your books, but that's okay as long as they like some of them.

This brings me to another popular question. What is my favorite book? This is going to sound like a cop out but they all are near and dear to me. Seriously! My publisher does not assign me book projects. I choose my own projects, so it is something I am knowledgeable and passionate about or I wouldn't have chosen to tackle it. I really enjoy researching and writing the ghost books. What's not to like? I get to poke around in creepy cemeteries, spooky lighthouses, old asylums, and haunted houses searching for restless spirits—and on occasion I have found them too! I get to research the history of these places and being a huge history buff that is exciting as the investigations.

I am passionate about all my travel books. I love sharing my love of travel and of specific destinations and types of travel. I am so proud and excited about my latest book series, Terrance Talks Travel. The first book, Terrance Talks Travel:

A Pocket Guide to South Africa, soon became an Amazon #1 bestseller and it remains one of my best-selling books. That is thrilling for me because it shows that folks appreciate my efforts and is high praise given the stiff competition among travel titles. Every book holds a special place in my heart. Lighthouses of the Carolinas was the first book I ever wrote so that makes it near and dear to me, especially since the second edition came out recently. Ghosts of the Carolina Coasts is the first ghost book I ever wrote and remains my best-selling ghost book even after all these years, so I will always have a special fondness for it.

If you're like to know more about me or any of these titles, you can check out www.terrancezepke.com or www.terrancetalkstravel.com. You can also find lengthy descriptions and "look inside" options through most online booksellers. We have also provided links for instant book previews for your convenience.

I hope this guide introduces you to some titles you didn't even know about or at the very least lets you know about more ways you can connect with me. Authors love to hear from readers. We truly appreciate you more than you'll ever know. Please feel free to send me a comment or question via the comment form found on every page of both my websites or follow me on your favorite social media. Don't forget that you can also listen to my writing podcast on iTunes, A Writer's Journey, or my travel show, Terrance Talks Travel: Über Adventures on Blog Talk Radio. The best way to make sure you don't miss any episodes of these shows, new book releases and giveaways, contests, my TRIP PICK OF THE WEEK, cheap travel tips, Africa travel tips, free travel reports, my annual Countdown to Halloween, and more is to subscribe to Terrance Talks Travel on www.terrancetalkstravel.com or A Writer's Journey, and/or Mostly Ghostly on www.terrancezepke.com.

Thanks for your interest and Happy Reading!
